Editorial

The making of a journal is a very challenging task. This Special Issue of the Journal of Educational and Social Research published by the Mediterranean Center for Educational and Social Research at Sapienza University of Rome, Italy is a collection of selected papers presented at the International Conference on Teaching and Learning (ICTL2011) held in Omoku-Nigeria.

Special thanks go to the Provost, Management, Staff and Students of Federal College of Education (Technical), Omoku-Nigeria for providing the venue for the conference that led to the selection of papers which made this publication possible. The LOC deserves special commendation. They have not only worked with great skills and efficiency, but have shown throughout the event their desire to contribute towards making a world that is resonating with academic excellence and scholarship.

Professor Alice Kagoda, Professor Peter U. Akanwa, Professor Antonello Biagini, Professor Andrea Carteny, Professor Giovanna Motta, Professor Antonello Battaglia, Professor Gabriele Natalizia, Professor Igor Baglioni, Professor Giuseppe Motta, Professor Addison Wokocha, Professor Benedicta Egbo, Professor Shobana Nelascio, Professor Oby Okonkwor, Professor M.O.N. Obagah and Professor Hanna David were very resourceful and immense editorial support.

Education is in crisis-state in the global south. This special issue of JESR examined some of the crucial issues in educational and social development.

Dr. Jacinta A. Opara

Visiting Associate Professor, Universidad Azteca, Chalco-Mexico and
President, African Association for Teaching and Learning